THE HISTORY ON TYPES OF USA STUD WHEELS

There are two types of wheels - "Stud" pilot which use the nuts to centre the wheels, not common in Australia but on some imported vintage trucks. Today most are "Hub" pilot which uses the hub to centre the wheels. 150 pattern on the same old style Bud wheels. Some have a large stud and a thin nut and some have small stud and a large nut.

Early aluminium wheels had 5 slots. The story goes P.I.E. (Pacific Intermountain Express) had Alcoa make these wheels in the fifties as weight saving when tubeless was unheard of. The first Alcoa tubeless wheels started 1956 with a new design in 1963 and changed from 5 holes to 10. Tyres lasted better, less flats, easier repairs.

HISTORY OF SPIDER TUBELESS STEEL RIMS

With the change from 10.00 - 20 inch tube tyres they became 22.5 and 10.00 22 inch became 24.5 in tubeless and the 24 inch tube tyre do not have a tubeless replacement. Tubeless rims first started to go on the Australian market in early 1970's. There are 3 standard sizes, 7.5 inches wide x 22.5 inches diameter. 8.25 inches wide x 22.5 inches diameter. This is the best size for the 11R.22-5 tyre. The third is the offset type rim 9 inches wide x 22.5 inches diameter. This rim is suitable for chroming for use on the steer axle. I purchased the first new truck with tubeless rims in 1976 and went from 4 to 6 punctures per week to zero road side changes per year.
